Fashion Items.

Bronze and crimson form a fashionable combination.

Miles of satin or moire ribbon are frequently used upon an elaborately trimmed evening dress of the latest make.

A witty communication upon the present styles says that there is but little difference between the picture of a mediæval saint and a modern fashionable sinner.

Narrow braid, in silver or gold, is much used for trimming cloth dresses of a monochrome color. Ever so little of this garniture goes a great way in effect. An unsparing use of it is gaudy in the extreme.

The new shade of royal cardinal promises to be a leading color this fall. Plain velvet is now considered much "smarter" than that which is ribbed, brocade or striped.

Black velvet, striped and beaded grenadine, worn over a short underskirt of plain black velvet, makes an elegant summer toilet for a cool evening at the seaside.

Lace flounces and frills, and also muslin embroideries, look well when placed over thin colored materials, such as batiste and India muslin. The tone given by these semi-transparent fabrics is much more delicate than where silk is employed as a foundation.

It is quite the fashion for ladies at the seashore to provide themselves with a long scarf of cream-white crape gauze, which the lady winds once around her hat, and twice around her neck. This protects her face, makes a light, agreeable covering for her throat, and helps to keep her wavy tresses of hair in crimp—a trio of advantages not to be overlooked.

A new and extremely beautiful shade of golden brown promises to eclipse all other colors in popular favor for autumn dinner or carriage costumes. In combination dresses of satin and velvet, this color in its most golden hue for the satin fabric and a deeper shade for the velvet, forms a most ladylike and effective toilet, either for the street or the drawing-room.

A lovely little French bonnet sent over as a model to a noted American importer is made of primrose-colored crepe and laurel green velvet. The brim is edged with three rows of iridescent beads, which send forth opalescent lights of gold, pink, pearl and emerald. The crown of the hat is partly covered by soft laurel green ostrich tips, and underneath these peep forth a cluster of pale pink poppies. The strings are of laurel green velvet, lined with primrose satin.

Some of the new autumn walking costumes of tweed are decidedly masculine in style, showing a white underwaist coat, cutaway coat, fastened just below the chest with one button, a standing collar, with round gold collar-button, and linen cuffs held together by large gold links or huge cuff-buttons, and, crowning all, a jaunty English, low-crowned derby hat, devoid of trimming of any sort. Many English girls go a step further than the Yankee girl dares to, and carry a slender ebony cane.

Gloves are as long as ever, and the tan-colored variety are still worn with full evening dress. This odd fashion is far from the purest or best taste, but nevertheless it is in the height of style, and we are aware what violent objections and fierce criticisms may be overruled by this magical assurance. Critically, however, these gloves, dark and ugly in shade, and looking especially so when worn in conjunction with pure white and other delicate evening toilets, are really neither appropriate, becoming, nor pretty.

Extremely light summer cashmere is much used as flounces or kitting over silk foundations. The flounces are often arranged in wide, hollow plaits, very much open at the foot of the skirt, so as to show the bright lining of a contrasting color. Around the bottom of others there is a thick ruche of the cashmere, lined with silk. In the latter case the panners are of cashmere, faced with silk, and the bodice is of silk, with cashmere trimmings—plastron, or vest, collar and revers. A small cashmere pelerine completes the costume, and renders any extra mantle unnecessary.—N. Y. Evening Post.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—There is an Indian Presbytery in Dakota composed of eleven churches. Several of the pastors are full-blooded Indians.

—The United Presbyterian Church of this country is still rent in twain over the question whether or not instrumental music shall be allowed in the church. It is said that the matter will be ultimately carried into the courts.—Chicago Tribune.

—Locations for two new Indian schools have been selected by Inspector Haworth. One will be in Indian Territory, south of Arkansas City; the other on the old Pawnee reservation in Nebraska. Operations will be commenced at both points in the spring.

—A noteworthy thing in connection with American civilization is the fact that a majority of the Japanese students sent to America returned to their native country Christians, while not one such case occurred among those sent to the educational institutions of Germany, France and England.—Chicago Herald.

—The San Francisco School Board is taking action for remedying the distinction between the primary teacher's salary and that paid to the grammar teacher. It is beginning to be recognized everywhere that a high degree of experience and natural ability as well as are required from the teacher who gives the first impression to the little mind.—San Francisco Chronicle.

—A wealthy bachelor of Oregon, whose death lately occurred in the East while on a visit, has given the most valuable farm in the cove to a school for young ladies. The buildings for the school will be erected soon. This farm contains thirty-four thousand prune and plum trees, and the proceeds from the sale of fruit are some ten thousand dollars a year.—Chicago Times.

—The Allegheny (Pa.) Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church has agreed to allow the Rev. John Fer, pastor of the Bethel Church, Allegheny, permission to ride on a Sunday train on his way to and from divine services at Natrona, fifteen miles up the Allegheny Valley Railroad. The question involved a heated discussion, and the vote stood eleven for and fifteen against.—N. Y. Post.

—Evangelist Harrison, the "boy preacher," made such extraordinary success in his revival work at the Jackson-Street Church, in St. Paul, that he was engaged for another term of service. During six weeks of special meetings about three hundred and fifty converts were enrolled. After laboring at the church he went to the Minnesota State camp meeting, where there were about two hundred tents and cottages, with an immense crowd of people. His next engagement is for next year, and he is to be assisted by Chaplain McCabe and the colored lady evangelist, Mrs. Amanda Smith.

—If it is true, as New York publishers assert, that Wisconsin sends more poetry than any other five States combined, lands in Michigan ought to jump ten per cent this very month.—Detroit Free Press.

THERE seems to be little doubt of the passage of a two-cent postage bill at this session of Congress.

W. H. TAFT, collector of internal revenue in the Cincinnati district, has resigned, the resignation to take effect January 1st.

ARABI and other prisoners, sentenced to exile, are requested to be ready to start within ten day. Allowances are granted them from their properties, which were confiscated. The property of their wives was not confiscated.

ALL the appropriation bills that have thus far passed congress are less than usual. It looks as if the able Republican legislators are preparing to handicap the coming Democratic House by heavy deficiencies. This is one way of whipping the Devil around the stump, but it will fail to deceive the people.

THE house judiciary committee is expected to report favorably on the bill creating eighteen new circuit judges to take the place of the supreme court of the United States. The bill will be hotly opposed in the house, as the new judges are to hold their positions for life, and Democrats do not want to see partisan Republican appointed.

EDWARD COX, who killed Col. R. A. Alston in 1879, and who has been since his conviction working in a coal mine as superintendent of convicts, has been pardoned by the governor of Georgia. His release was effected through the efforts of his devoted wife and the magnanimity of the family of Colonel Alston.

A FRANKFORT special dated the 12th inst. says: In the matter of taxing the stocks and securities belonging to the Frankfort Building Association, Judge R. A. Thompson made an order to-day directing the president of the association to furnish the county court with a list of the stockholders and the number of shares each one possessed. The stockholders who have heretofore not given in their stock in the association for assessment will be compelled to pay the back taxes.

THE suggestion of President Arthur in his message that the law be so changed that the Executive may veto a part of a bill, that is to say, some of the sections or items, and assent to the remainder, is receiving very favorable comment from the press, irrespective of party, throughout the country. The idea does not seem to be a bad one, as it would enable the President, if he had the sand to do so, to put an effectual check upon jobs. Such a law would go far toward stopping "log rolling" raids upon the Treasury.

WHAT AUDITOR HEWITT SAYS.

That the Register of the Land Office was Delayed in Making His Report on Account of Excess of Business.

Louisville Post.

FRANKFORT, Dec. 9th.—Your reporter reached here this morning and has been looking up, in a quiet way, the alleged irregularities of certain state officials. The result of my investigations may be summed up thus:

The Post's local correspondent, in his published statements regarding a shortage in the accounts of Register Sheldon, was doubtless made the victim of Capt. Sheldon's enemies, for whilst it is true that no report was made from his office on the 1st of January last, yet it is also the fact that a strict conformity with the law in regard to making reports to the Auditor of state, as prescribed by law, have never been complied with by any Register. We called to see General Fayette Hewitt, and he freely gave us all the information in his possession regarding the matter.

WHAT AUDITOR HEWITT SAYS.

Your reporter asked General Hewitt if he had at any time called upon Capt. Sheldon more than once for his report.

"No, sir," he replied, "and the Register at once responded by paying over the full amount of his indebtedness to the state."

"Does the law require a settlement to be made on the first of January?"

"Yes; but my information is that it has not been customary with former officials to conform strictly to the letter of the law, but to comply with its spirit, and Captain Sheldon, having a larger amount of work to perform than any of his predecessors, failed to make his report just at the exact time required by law."

"You speak of a larger amount of work, can you give me the exact figures from reports for a few years past?"

"Yes, sir; by reference to my books I find them to be as follows for five years past: 1877, $646 50; 1878, $527 25; 1879, $515 25; 1880, 657 82; 1881, $1,068 25. You will perceive," continued Gen. Hewitt, "that there is an excess of receipts over 1879 of more than 100 per cent., and of 1880 of more than 75 per cent."

"Then, I understand that you attach no importance to Capt. Sheldon's failure to make his report, other than the large excess of work required the clerks to be much longer in getting their labors in proper shape for a report?"

"Yes, sir; these sums are collected in amounts as small as fifty cents, and to add them up correctly requires a great deal of labor."

After applying the reportorial pen to Gen. Hewitt, your reporter next examined the records and ascertain that Capt. Sheldon's bond was filed in the office of the secretary of state, Sept. 2, 1879, the approval of which was amongst the last official acts of Gov. McCreary.

The entire matter of Capt. Sheldon's alleged shortage seems to have originated with his enemies, and one or two parties who hope to defeat him for a renomination. At the time the statements were published they created attention throughout the state, and your reporter was frequently approached during his recent trip to Western Kentucky, and questioned about the matter by people who seemed anxious to know the true facts in regard to it. It has reacted with sufficient force upon the heads of its instigators as to make the renomination and election of Capt. Sheldon almost certain.

THE Commissioner of Pension in his annual report says in relation to the "pension population," of the country that he has been unable to procure data upon the subject. "The best approximation that can be made shows that of the 2,063,391 soldiers who enlisted during the war, pensions have been applied for by or on account of only 20 per cent." He concluded by saying that, "from the best available information it appears that there is a surviving soldier population of a little over 1,000,000, out of which claims for pensions in the future may be made by those who incurred pensionable disabilities."

THE engineer in charge of the National monument at Washington, has decided to add four more courses of granite and marble to the structure before roofing over for the winter. This will add eight feet to the height of the column, which, is now three hundred and thirty-four feet.

THE elegant steamer, Bostona, in complete repair and handsomer than when she first came from the builders' hands, is now plying in the Cincinnati and Pomeroy trade, in place of the Ohio. The latter boat is laid up for repairs.

SINCE the construction of the street railway at Lexington, property in the suburbs especially has been steadily advancing in price. A large territory has been laid off into building lots and many new houses have been put up and others will be built in the spring. So much for a street railway.

Robbing at Aberdeen.

About one o'clock this morning the store of P. N. Bradford & Co., at Aberdeen, was broken into and robbed of dry goods, boots, shoes, hardware, clothing and other articles. The thieves got into the building through the front door which they broke open with a crowbar and butchers' cleaver. The former article was stolen from J. B. Campbell's saw mill and the latter from George Enis' meat store. There is no clue to the thieves.

ALF BURNETT, the well known character delineator and humorist, will give an entertainment at the opera house next Saturday evening in an entirely new programme. A letter received to-day by the BULLETIN from Mr. Burnett says:

I have many pleasant memories of Mason county, and "I John D. Edmonds, of Mason county, Ky.—Most glorious to behold." It was there over twenty-six years ago that Col. H. T. Stanton wrote the poem that is now world famous—"The Moneyless Man." He wrote it for me. It is a poem that I am proud to say, from its intrinsic merit, won the encomiums of the entire English speaking people. I read the poem over one hundred times at Egyptian Hall, in London. I read it in Paris, at Edinburgh and all through England, Ireland, Wales, and it is looked upon as the standard motto poem of America. It will be added to my programme next Saturday night by special request.
Yours Truly,
ALF. BURNETT.

State of Lewis at Large.

S. J. Dodd, of Bentonville, entertained the BULLETIN man at his house with a practical joke on his wife that is too good to be lost. Mrs. Dodd's father came to visit her, being tired retired early and commenced snoring. Mrs. Dodd not knowing the difference between a hundred pound snore and the rattle of the Maysville stage, took in the situation as a genuine death struggle, and at each gasp, snort and throat rattle gave vent to the most agonizing weeping. Hour after hour she stood over the roaring parent thinking each struggle was the last of Pa's earthly home. With a devoted child's regard waited and watched over his bed till the dawn of day, when the sleeper awoke and told his weeping child, I was only snoring my daughter. Dodd, the waggish husband, lay in the next room laughing till he shook the house and says he never enjoyed a camp meeting so much as he did seeing her watching her father die all night.

Ex-Senator R. B. Lovel, of Maysville, is attending the Lewis court. His friends volunteered to send down one or two thousand unarmored Lewis county voters to promote his election to the city council of Maysville. The state of Lewis wants a representative in that body.

Judge Cole is holding court morning, noon and night. The night sessions are largely attended and more progress made than by day.

Hon. W. H. Wadsworth received a generous welcome by the legal profession and the public generally. His very presence in a court room occasion profound respect and attention.

Andrew J. Cochran, the young lawyer from your bar, has made an enviable reputation here at a night session. He proved the advantage of a thorough training in law schools citing his precedents from memory and reading his decisions with a clearness of pronunciation that a full house heard and understood the classic reader. Mr. Wadsworth had his hands full to combat his power.

DIMPLES MADE TO ORDER.

How the Prettiest of Dimples are Made on Women's Arms—A Woman's Story.

Chicago Tribune.

That artificial dimples can be made when and where desired seems to be an established fact, from the following confession: "Learning that there was a place in the city where dimples were made to order, I went there out of curiosity. I was shown into a parlor somewhat resembling a dentist's operating room. There was a glass case full of bottles, washes and wigs, and a regular dentist's chair that suggested a world of comfort. To me presently came a dapper little man in a velvet cut-away coat, and whose face wore a complacent smirk. I bashfully suggested the dimple question, and asked for some points. I really wanted a dimple in my arm, and told him so. But I insinuated my disbelief in his ability to produce the necessary article. Whereupon he convinced me by practice. This is how it is done: My arm being bare, and the exact spot indicated, he placed a small glass tube, the orifice of which was extremely small, upon the spot. This tube had working within it a piston, and was so small that when the handle was drawn upon the air was exhausted from the tube, and it adhered to the flesh, raising a slight protuberance. Around this portion the operator daintily tied a bit of scarlet silk, and then took away his suction machine. The little point of skin that was thus raised he sliced off with a wicked-looking knife, bringing the blood. I tried hard not to scream, but it was so unexpected that I had to. Then he bound up the the arm, placing over the wound a small silver object like an inverted cone, the point of which was rounded and polished. This little point was adjusted so as to depress the exact center of the cut. Then he told me to go away and not touch the spot until the next day. When I came at that time he dressed my arm again, and this operation was repeated for five days, when the wound was healed. The silver cone was removed and there, sure enough, beneath it was the prettiest dimple in the world! And all I had to pay was $10.

BOYS WAITING ON BRIDES.

A Fashion That Substitutes Fancifully Dressed Boys for Maidens.

New York Letter.

Boys are the last fashion for bridesmaids—a statement which, now that it looks up to me from paper, scarce seems logical. Nevertheless, you know what I mean—that suffices. I do not mean, however, that boys are the only fashion, but one of the fashions, for in the fall epidemic of weddings peculiar to 1882 no fact shows forth more plainly that there are many facts, all equally true. It is curious to read in the different fashion magazines the directions as to outfits, whether of the young lady who, according to Beecher, is about to "marry a divinity and sadly thereafter consent to live with a man," or of her equally poetic bridesmaids, whether girls or boys. One says dresses are made simple and of one or two materials; another says they are rich and varied and display combinations of three or four fabrics, etc. Which is right? All, I answer; and great, therefore, is your liberty of conscience.

But boys should be fancifully dressed as pages, copied after old pictures, and unquestionably 'tis the revival of by-gone ideas that bring up a really pretty thought. Then too, the present notable seeking after color has caused an attiring of bridesmaids in different dresses of pronounced hue, such as crimson, blue, yellow, green, etc., the grouping to imitate old paintings.

Nilsson Singing to Her Lover.

Chicago Herald.

It was about the time of her last concerts in Farewell Hall that the papers whispered it that the betrothed of the great singer was, day by day, expected from over the ocean. He came the very afternoon of the concert, and during her songs he sat in a front seat close by the stage. Nilsson was in royal good humor that night. She was all smiles and affability, from one end of the programme to the other. For one of her encores she removed her gloves, and seating herself at the piano sang a most coquettish love song, straight at the head of her lover. It was a sight worth seeing, and there is little doubt but the young man thought it was good to be there.

Nilsson comes back to us dressed in black. Her husband has been called to join the majority.

Sir Garnet Wolseley.

General Wolseley is the son of an English Major, and was born near Dublin in 1833. He entered the army as Ensign in 1852, and in 1865 had risen through the various ranks to that of Colonel. His first service was in the Burmese war of 1852-53, for which he received a medal. Afterward he was awarded still higher distinction in the Crimean War, receiving the Legion of Honor and the Turkish decoration. He was also at the siege of Lucknow and the defense of Almbagh, where his gallant services gained him the promotion to a Lieutenant-Colonel. In 1860 he served through the Chinese campaign, and received another medal. In 1867 he visited America as Deputy Quartermaster-General in Canada, and commanded the Red River expedition. His next active service was in 1873, when he commanded the troops on the Gold Coast during the Ashantee war, with the rank of Major-General. The campaign commenced in September of that year, and, after many hard marches and discouragements, owing to the peridy of the natives, he finally defeated the Ashantees in February, 1874, and received the submission of their King in his Capital, Coomassie. For the success of this expedition he received the thanks of Parliament and a grant of $100,000, was created a K. C. B., and given the freedom of the city of London and a splendid sword. Early in 1875 he was dispatched to Natal to administer the government of that colony. He remained there until 1876, when he was nominated a member of the Council of India. In 1878 he was made administrator of the Island of Cyprus, which came into English occupation through a supplementary agreement with Turkey after the Berlin Congress. After the disasters to the English in Zululand under Lord Chelmsford and Colonel Evelyn Wood, General Wolseley was appointed to the supreme military command, Sir Bartle Frere, Governor of Cape Colony, and Sir Henry Bulwer, Lieutenant-Governor of Natal, retaining their positions, but being subordinate to General Wolseley, who assumed command in June, 1879. The British force advanced in that month and defeated the Zulus at Ulundi in July. By the 12th of that month all the chiefs except Cetawavo and Siraywo had submitted. General Wolseley then took the field in person and followed up Cetawavo so vigorously that on the 28th of August he surrendered, and three days afterwards General Wolseley met the chiefs and submitted a treaty to them which they signed. Since that time and until the outbreak of the Egyptian war General Wolseley has remained in South Africa as the Civil Governor of Natal and the Transvaal. With his career since that time our readers are familiar. His expedition on from Alexandria to Port Said, his occupation of the canal, his advance from Ismailia to Tel el-Kebir, his capture of the latter place, and his still more rapid advance to Cairo, and his capture of Arabi Bey are among the most brilliant actions of his career, and appear all the more remarkable when it is remembered that he predicted before leaving London that the war would be over September 15—a prophecy fulfilled to the day—thus showing that no element of chance entered into the prosecution of his campaign.—Chicago Tribune.

Mahouts.

Men in India who drive or care for elephants are called mahouts. If there are children in the family the elephant shows great fondness for them, and are really careful nurses. In that warm climate it is no uncommon thing for a jackal or wolf to walk into a hut when the mother is away, or even when her back is turned, and pick up and carry off the baby. But if placed in the elephant's care she can go away feeling perfectly safe, and the children enjoy their huge playfellow. Sometimes a number of elephants may be seen lying down in the water, with their backs just above the surface, making a small island on which the children play in great glee. If one tumbles off the elephant fishes him up with his trunk and puts him back again.—Chicago Herald.
